How's ICD-10 Going?

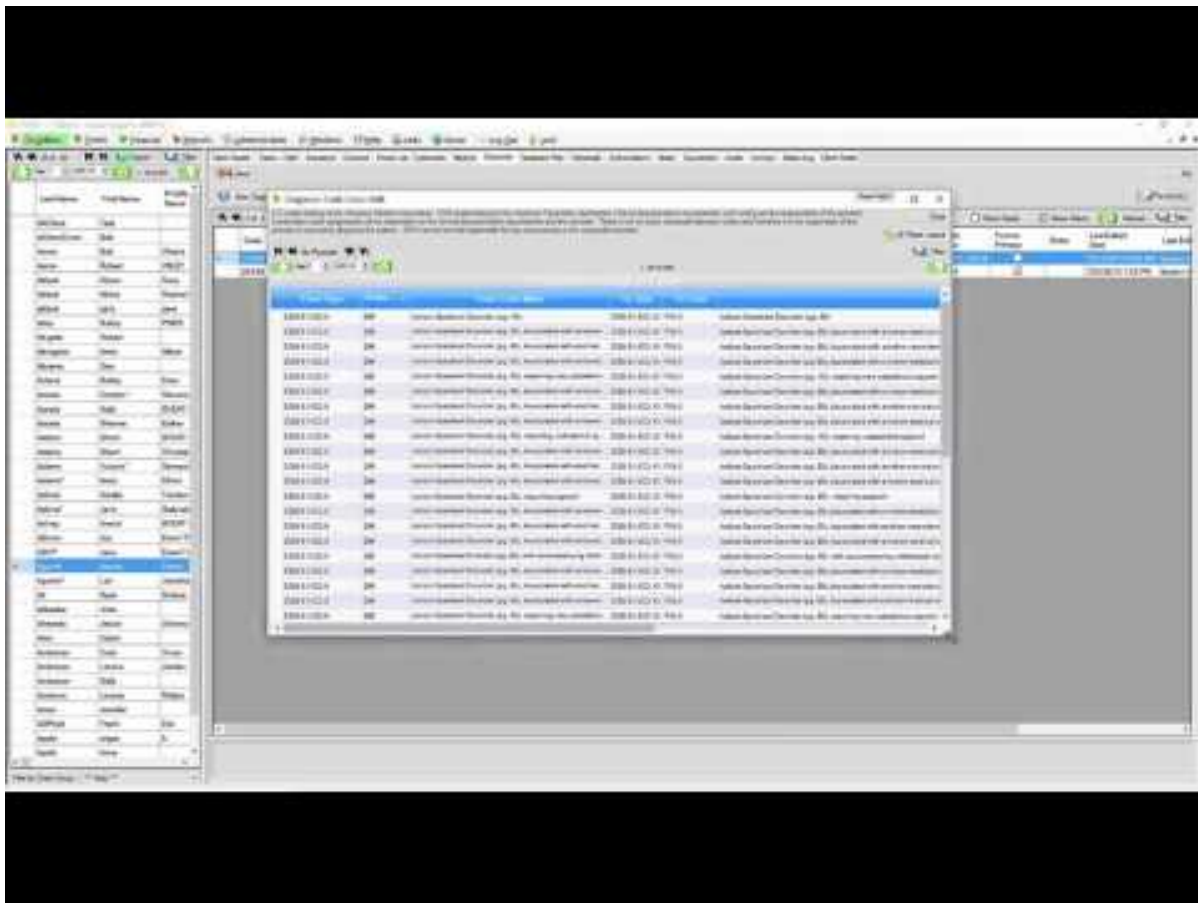

For some practices, the transition has been smooth: providers are diagnosing with ICD-10 for dates of service 10.1.15 and beyond; continuing to use ICD-9 for dates of service 9.30.15 and prior; and the billing is being efficiently sent out.

Other organizations are struggling: their providers are having to having to choose from a much larger code pool, and management is becoming concerned with the decrease in billing volume.

We've Only Just Begun

Although the ICD-10 deadline was 10.1.15, it will take several months for the full effect of the transition to take hold. Even if your practice is prepared and properly trained, it's ultimately up to the payers to determine whether the transition will – or won't – be successful, and what that means for reimbursements and practice viability.
