Data Breaches: What Could Have Stopped Them?

Everyone in the medical field should know by now that data breaches are extra difficult on healthcare organizations. PHI is especially attractive to hackers because it contains more personal information. Medical practices are “held to the highest trust standards” and when breached, can suffer very stiff penalties for HIPPA non-compliance.

Seniors and Addiction: The Silent Epidemic

Did you know that nearly 50 percent of nursing home residents have alcohol-related problems?!

When looking at who is affected by addiction, those age 65 and up are the group most often under-diagnosed. According to the Office of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Services, seniors battling addiction can be categorized into those who have a long withstanding dependency - and those who developed an addiction at this stage in life, typically as a result of health-related issues or life-changing events (loss of a loved one, retirement, financial strains, etc.).

When conducting health screenings among seniors, symptoms of addiction or drug dependency may be overlooked because they often mimic other common issues among that population, such as depression, diabetes or Alzheimer's.
