>> Telehealth for Coronavirus <<

No one knows how the coronavirus will impact our nation, communities, and economy. However, many experts are urging Americans to prepare for a scenario in which schools, grocery stores, and many other places of business shut down for up to 3 months.

How do you continue treating patients if they aren't able to come to your agency? Telehealth services - including telepsychiatry and telepsychotherapy - offer a secure, HIPAA-compliant method to conduct mental health services remotely.

This tool can be utilized any time coming into your facility is prohibitive: snow days, sick kid, or illness. Additionally, our ePrescribe functionality allows you conduct an entire session outside of the typical office setting.

While these solutions don't solve all of the challenges that the coronavirus will bring, telehealth can certainly help keep organizations afloat in times of potential shutdown.

Please check with your payers on the rules governing the provision of telehealth services for your agency.*
