

HIPAA Misinformation

How do you know what is true and what is false in the HIPAA world? Many people have been confused about HIPAA information that could interfere with their total HIPAA compliance. Here are five samples of HIPAA compliance misinformation:

1. Over & Out

Compliance isn't something you can partially or fully complete and then rest on your laurels. The HIPAA documentation and procedures you have defined must be reviewed and adjusted each year so that your ongoing compliance remains intact.

Another fact is that, according to HIPAAAtrek, YOU MUST have knowledge of your company's procedures. If your business ha

2. Only Providers Need To Be Compliant

Ever heard of a Business Associate? What about the companies you do business with – are THEY HIPAA compliant? Anyone who accesses your client data, such as your EMR software support, labs, etc., must also have the required documentation, procedures and processes in place in order to be HIPAA compliant.

Providers (Covered Entities / CEs) should obtain documentation from their Business Associates proclaiming their HIPAA compliance. If you need a Business Associate statement from the PIMSY folks, get in touch with us and we will be glad to send our HIPAA compliance documentation.

I LOVE LOVE LOVE PIMSY!!

"I LOVE LOVE LOVE PIMSY.....it has made my job / life so much easier, especially with billing and payments.

I used to spend hours on it and now it is just a few clicks and everything is done. Everything is very user friendly and all of the features are easy to learn."
{Erin W., Office Manager}

Wouldn't it be nice to love your EHR!? Check out more PIMSY love on our Kudos page - and see honest customer reviews on our Capterra profile.

Clinician Toolbox

While we all can - and should - learn from our mistakes, clinicians are often held up to deity-like standards, which can lead to miscommunication between client and provider.
